17.06 J 17.06 J 1 EIRCUMSTANTIAL NARRATIVE Of the LOSS of the HALSEWELL (EAST-IN.DIAMAN.) Capt. RICHARD PIERCE, Which was unfortunately wrecked at SEACOMBE in the ISLE of PURBECK, On the Coeflof DORSETSHIRE, On the Mörning of Friday the 6th of January, 1786-COMPILED FROM THE ۲. Communications, and under the Authorities of Mr HENRY MERITON and Mr. JOHN ROGERS, . The two chief Officers Who happily escaped the dreadful Cataftrophe. The THIRD EDITION. L O N D O N: Printed for WILLIAM LANE, Leadenhall-fireet. M.DCC.LXXXVI.

( Price One Shilling. )

Entered at Stationer's Pall, According to Act of Parliament.

I HE Circumstances of this Narrative were communicated to the EDITOR by US; and the whole ACCOUNT, as far as it comes within the reach of our Knowledge is strictly TRUE. HENRY MERITON, JOHN ROGERS.

. [ ]

NARRATIVE, &c.

Α

THE misfortunes of individuals affecting only their immediate relatives, occasion no publick concern; and death presented in any of its ordinary forms, though at all times awful, is too familiar to be tremendous; but when numbers are involved in one common fate, and that fate is attended with circumstances of unufual horror, the united blow is felt by the whole community, the republic itself is convulsed by

[ 2 ]

by the shock, and grief, pity, and regret, spread themselves among all orders and conditions of men.

Thus the decease of a single citizen, however respectable his character, however amiable his conduct, passes unnoticed among the daily records of mortality; and the number who fall in a battle, or perish in a fight, are enumerated and recounted without emotion; whilst the fatality of a pestilence, the devastations of an earthquake, and the terrors of a storm, fix on the mind, and awaken the passions to sympathetic fensibility.

Nor is this diffinction unwarranted by reason; the common lot of mortals we are prepared to expect, and know to be unavoidable, unavoidable, and the events of war are equally obvious and certain; but the peftilence, the earthquake, and the ftorm, are calamities of which no apprehensions are formed, and which rulh on with such such fudden and inevitable violence, as to bid defiance to fortitude, and baffle the efforts of philosophic arguments.

[3]

The melancholy Catastrophe which is intended to be the subject of the following pages, is of a nature so direful, that humanity recoils at the recollection of it; and among the various events of the same deplorable kind, which have blackened the annals of the last forty years, scarce one has been attended with so many circumstances of aggravated woe.

[ 4 ]

Of the loss of the Victory, no certain accounts have ever been received; the prevailing opinion has been, that she funk at once; and that her numerous, and still lamented crew, were overwhelmed in momentary destruction.

The fate of the Doddington East-

•

Indiaman is too well known to require a repetition, she struck at once on an unknown rock, and the destiny of the sufferers, and those who escaped, was determined in the course of a very few hours.

In the St. George, which was unfortunately burnt in the Bay of Gibraltar, in the year 1758, but few, in comparison, perished, relief was almost instantaneously afforded afforded to the furvivors, and the accident was one of those, which even the cafualties of war might have occasioned, to a ship prepared for battle.

1 5 ]

The wreck of the Ramilies on the western coast of England, and of the Litchfield on the African shore, were each of them marked with many circumstances of horror; in the former case no more than 24 lives were faved, out of a crew which confifted of near 800; and in the latter, instant death was avoided, at the expence of a blessing, dearer than even life itself, the furvivors being immediately reduced to a state of slavery, from which they were not emancipated till after a tedious. and difficult negotiation; but these were both ships of war, destined to dangerous

£.,

and

. [· 6 ]

and adventurous services, in which the tenure of existence could be only precariously held, and must be confidered to be subject to the variety of contingencies ever annexed to such employments.

The loss of the Royal George was indeed a national missortune of great magnitude. The braye Admiral Kempenfelt, the experienced officers, and the able and selected scamen who constituted her unfortungte crew, were so many pillars withdrawn from the support of a fabrick, of which its naval strength is the only prop; nor will the merit of the individual sufferers, or the injury sustained by the public, be forgotten, whilst the ports of Great-Britain can furnish a fleet to maintain that Empire over the main, to which her fituation, her interests, and her superiority in nauticalskill and bravery, so justly intitle her; but even the gloom of this scene of distress is alleviated by the confideration, that the fate of those who suffered, was unattended with the aggravation of lingering and hopeless apprehension.

When we reflect on the loss of the. Grosvenor on the Eastern coast of Africa, we shudder at the miseries of the surviving few, and cease to deplore the less rigid destiny of those, who by immediate death, were happily exempted from the dreadful participation; --- of this fad event we shall have occasion to speak hereafter, and hope, from a further consideration of it, to offer consolation to the

[8]

the afflicted relations and friends of those, who on the present most unhappy occafion, have been the untimely victims of misfortune.

- The recent shipwreck of the Nancy Pacquet, on the fatal rocks of Scilly, in her homeward-bound passage from Bonsbay, is fresh in the memory of our readers; but though the destruction in that instance was more complete than in this now immediately before us, yet we are inclined to believe, that those who peruse this narrative will be of opinion, that it was less horrible, and that if such scenes will admit of comparison, the circumstances of the present case were more lamentable.

The Halfewell East-Indiaman, of 758

•

[ 9 ]

tons burthen, commanded by Richard Pierce, Esq; having been taken up by the Directors of the East India Company to make her third voyage to Coast and Bay, on the 16th day of November, 1785, fell down to Gravesend, where she completed her lading; and taking the ladies and other passengers on board at the Hope, she sailed through the Downs on Sunday the 1st of January, 1786, and the next morning being a breast of Dunnose, it fell calm.

And at this moment let us take a prospect of an outset, in which all appearances united to promile a happy and prosperous voyage, and not a cloud intervened to obscure the pleasing hopes, which are ever annexed to a life of Adventure, and which are the main fprings of Industry, the foundations of commercial Spirit, and the conductors co private wealth and honor, and public advantage and aggrandizement.

[ 10 ]

The Ship one of the finest in the service, and supposed to be in the most perfect condition for her voyage; the Commander of diffinguished ability, and exemplary character; his Officers, men of unquestioned knowledge in their profession, and of approved fidelity; the Crew, the best seamen that could be collected, and as numerous as the effablishment admits; to whom were added a confiderable body of foldiers, destined to recruit the forces of the Company in Afra.

[ 11 ]

- The very respectable passengers were:
- Miss Amy Paul - Daughters of Mr. Paul of Somersetshire, & Re-Miss Mary Paul - - lations to Capt. Pierce.

Miss Elizabeth Blackburne, daughter of Capt. Blackburne, of the same service.

Miss Mary Haggard, lister to an officer on the Madrass establishment, and Miss Anne Mansell, a native of Madrass, but of European Parents, returning from receiving her education in England.

John George Schutz, Efq; returning

 $\bullet \bullet$

•

[ 12 ]

to Alia, where he had long relided, to collect a part of his fortune which he had left there.

The ladies were equally diffinguished by their beauty and accomplishments, the gentleman amiable in his manners, and of high respect in his character. Mr. Burston, the chief mate, was also related to Capt. Pierce's lady; and it is hardly possible to conceive a more friendly and happy fociety, nor one more calculated to join in diverting the tediousness of a long passage, by little plans of rational amusement, and by anticipating the pleafing scenes of novelty, the congratulations of expecting friends, and the fuccels and prosperity which awaited the accomplishment of their voyage. • •

**`

[ I3 ]

The objects of the voyage highly laudable, to extend the commerce, and to employ that useful and absolutely necestary body of men, whole fervices are now no longer required for national defence; to furnish the community with articles by use become effential necessaries; - to provide others' for foreign markets, which produce an influx of profit from the various nations of Europe, and to obtain decent and competent rewards for the skill, affiduity, and diligence, of the Commander and his Officers. Such are the ends pursued in a mercantile voyage, in the attainment of which, not only the state itself, but every member of the common-wealth is unquestionably interested.

[ 14 ]

From fuch pleafing expectations, fuch encouraging, fuch animating profpects, we are compelled to turn out eyes on a fcene of diftrefs fo fatal and complicated, that humanity fickens at the recollection, and the pen trembles while it records the melancholy tale.

Monday the 2d of January, at three in the afternoon, a breeze forung up from the South, when they ran in fhore to land the pilot, but very thick weather coming on in the evening, and the wind baffling, at nine in the evening they were obliged to anchor in eighteen fathom water, furled their top-fails, but could not furl their courfes, the fnow falling thick, and freezing as it fell.

Tuefdav

•

[ 15 ]

Tuesday the 3d, at four in the morning, a ftrong gale came on from East-North East, and the ship driving, they were obliged to cut their cables, and run off to sea. At noon, they spoke with a brig bound to Dublin, and having put their pilot on board her, bore down Channel immediately. At eight in the evening, the wind freshening and coming to the Southward, they reefed such fails as were judged necessary. At ten at night it blew a violent gale of wind at South, and they were obliged to carry a press of fail to keep the ship off shore, in doing which the hawse plugs, which according to a new improvement were put inside, were washed in, and the hawse bags washed away, in consequence of which they shipped a large quantity of water on the gun deck.

[ 16 ] On: founding the well, and finding the fhip had fprung a leak, and had five feet water in her hold, they clued the main top-fail up, hauled up the main-fail, and immediately endeavoured to furl both, but could not effect it—All the pumps were fet to work on difcovering the leak.

Wednefday the 4th, at two in the morning, they endeavoured to wear the fhip, but without fuccels, and judging it neceffary to cut away the mizen maft it was immediately done, and a fecond attempt made to wear the fhip, which fucceeded no better than the former; and the fhip having now feven feet water in her hold, and gaining fast on the pumps, it was thought expedient, for the prefervation of the fhip, to cut away the mainmast.

• •

17

mast, the ship appearing to be in immediate danger of foundering; in the fall of the mast, Jonathan Moreton, cockfwain, and four men, either fell or were drawn by the wreck over-board and drowned, and by eight in the morning the wreck was cleared, and the ship got before the wind, in which polition she was kept about two hours, in which time the pumps cleared the ship of two feet of water in the hold: At this time the ship's head was brought to the Eastward with the fore-fail only.

At ten in the morning the wind abated confiderably, and the ship labouring extremely, rolled the fore top-mast over on the larboard side, in the fall the wreck went through the fore-fail, and tore it to pieces. At eleven in the forenoon, the wind came to the Westward, and the weather clearing up, the Berry-head was diftinguishable béaring North and by East, distant four or five leagues; they now immediately bent another fore-fail, erected a jury main-maît, and set a topgallant-sail for a main-sail, under which fail they bore up for Portsmouth, and employed the remainder of the day in ### getting up a jury mizen-mast.

[ 18 ]

Thursday the 5th, at two in the morning, the wind came to the Southward, blew fresh, and the weather was very thick; at noon Portland was seen bearing North and by East, distant two or three leagues At eight at night it blew a strong gale at South, and at this time the Portland lights were seen bearing North

[ 19 ] . .

North-West, distant four or five leagues, when they wore the ship, and got her head to the Westward, but finding they lost ground on that tack, they wore her again, and kept stretching on to the Eastware, in hopes to have weathered Peverel-point, in which case they intended to have anchored in Studland-bay. At eleven at night it cleared, and they faw St. Alban'shead a mile and half to the leward of them, upon which they took in fail immediately, and let go the fmall bower. anchor, which brought up the ship at a whole cable, and the rode for about an heur, but then drove; they now let go the sheet anchor and wore away a whole cable, and the ship rode for about two hours longer, when she drove again.

·[ 20 ]

Whilft they were in this situation, the Captain sent for Mr. Henry Meriton, the chief officer who furvives, and asked his opinion as to the probability of faving their lives, to which he replied with equal calmness and candour, that he apprehended there was very little hope, as they were then driving fast on the shore, and might expect every moment to strike; ' the boats were then mentioned, but it was agreed that at that time they could be of no use, yet in case an opportunity should present itself of making them ferviceable, it was proposed that the officers should be confidentially requested to referve the long-boat for the ladies and themselves, and this precaution was immediately taken.

About

•

[.21]

About two in the morning of Friday the 6th, the ship still driving, and approaching very fast to the shore, the same officer again went into the cuddy, where the Captain then was, and another conversation took place, Captain Pierce expressing extreme anxiety for the preservation of his beloved daughters, and earnestly asking the officer if he could devise any means of saving them, and on his answering with great concern that he feared it would be impossible, but that their only chance would be to wait for the morning, the Captain lifted up his hands in silent and distressful ejaculation.

At this dreadful moment the ship struck with such violence as to dash the heads of those who were standing in the cuddy, cuddy, against the deck above them, and the fatal blow was accompanied by a shrick of horror, which burst at one instant from every quarter of the ship.

[ 22 ]

The feamen, many of whom had been remarkably inattentive and remifs in their duty during great part of the storm, and had actually skulked in their hammocks, and left the exertions of the pump, and the other labours attending their situation, to the officers of the ship, and the soldiers; (who had been uncommonly active and affiduous during the whole tremendous conflict,) rouzed by the destructive blow to a sense of their danger, now poured upon the deck, to which no endeavours of their officers could keep them whilit their

•

[ 23 ]

their affiltance might have been useful, and in frantic exclamations demanded of heaven and their fellow-fufferers, that fuccour, which their timely efforts might poffibly have fucceeded in procuring; but it was now too late, the fhip continued to beat on the rocks, and foon bulged, and fell with her broadfide towards the fhore: When the fhip ftruck, a number of the men climbed up the enfign ftaff, under an apprehension of her going to pieces immediately.

Mr. Meriton, the officer, whom we have already mentioned, at this crifis of horror, offered to these unhappy beings the best advice which could possibly be given to them; he recommended their coming all to that fide of the ship which lay

•

-

[ 24 ]

lay lowest on the rocks, and singly to take the opportunities which might then offer of elcaping to the shore. And having thus provided to the utmost of his power, for the fafety of the defponding crew, he returned to the roundhouse, where by this time all the passengers, and most of the officers were affembled, the latter employed in offering consolation to the unfortunate ladies, and with unparalelled magnanimity, fuffering their compation for the fair and amiable companions of their misfortunes, to get the better of the fense of their own danger, and the dread of almost inevitable annihilation. At this moment, what must be the feelings of a Father-of such a Eather a: Captain Pierce !

[ 25 ]

In this charitable work of offering comfort to the fair fufferers, Mr. Meriton, now joined by affurances of his opinion, that the fhip would hold together till the morning, when they would all be fafe, and Captain Pierce obferving one of the young gentlemen loud in his expressions of terror, and hearing him frequently exclaim that the fhip was going to pieces, he chearfully bid him hold his peace, obferving to him, that though the fhip should go to pieces, he would not, but would be fafe enough.

It will now be neceffary to defcribe the fituation of the place which proved fatal to fo many valuable and refpectable perfons, as without fuch a defcription it will be difficult to convey a proper idea of the melancholy, the deplorable fcene.

[ 26 ]

The ship struck on the rocks at or mear Seacombe, on the Island of Purbeck, between Peverel-Point, and St. Alban'shead, at a part of the shore where the cliff is of vast height, and rifes almost perpendicular from its base.

But at this particular fpot the cliff is excavated at the foot, and prefents a cavern of ten or twelve yards in depth, and of breadth equal to the length of a large fhip, the fides of the cavern fo nearly upright as to be extremely difficult of accefs, the roof formed of the ftupendous cliff, and the bottom of it ftrewed with fharp and uneven rocks, which feem to have been rent from above by fome convultion of nature.

•

[ 27 ]

It was at the mouth of this cavern that the unfortunate wreck lay stretched almost from fide to fide of it, and offering her broadfide to the horrid chasin.

But at the time the fhip ftruck it was too dark to difcover the extent of their danger, and the extreme horror of their fituation; even Mr. Meriton himfelf conceived a hope that fhe might keep together till day-light, and endeavoured to chear his drooping friends, and in particular the unhappy ladies, with this comfortable expectation, as an anfwer to the Captain's enquiries, how they went on, or what he thought of their fituation.

In addition to the company already in the round-house, they had admitted three black black women, and two foldiers wives, who with the husband of one of them had been permitted to come in, though the seamen who had tumultuously demanded entrance, to get the lights, had been opposed, and kept out by Mr. Rogers, the third Mate, and Mr. Brimer the fifth, so that the numbers there were now increased to near fifty; Captain Pierce sitting on a chair, 'cot, or some other moveable, with a daughter on each fide of him, each of whom he alternately pressed to his affectionate bosom; the reft of the melancholy affembly were feated on the deck, which was strewed with musical instruments, and the wreck of furniture, trunks, boxes and packages.

[ 28 ]

And here also Mr. Meriton, having previously previously cut several wax candles into pieces, and stuck them up in various parts of the round-house, and lighted up all the glass lanthorns he could find, took his feat, intending to wait the happy dawn, that might present to him the means of effecting his own escape, and afford him an opportunity of giving assistance to the partners of his danger; but observing that the poor . ladies appeared parched and exhausted, he fetched a basket of oranges from some part of the round-house, and prevailed on some of them to refresh themselves by fucking a little of the juice. At this time they were all tolerably composed, except Miss Mansel, who was in hysteric fits on the floor deck of the round-house.

[ 29 ]

[ 30 ]

But on his return to the company, he perceived a confiderable alteration in the appearance of the fhip, the fides were vifibly giving way, the deck feemed to be lifting, and he difcovered other ftrong fymptoms that fhe could not hold together much longer, he therefore attempted to go forward to look out, but immediately faw that the fhip was feparated in the middle, and that the fore part had changed its polition, and lay rather farther out towards the fea; and in this emergency, when the next moment might be charged with his fate, he determined to feize the prefent, and to follow the example of the crew, and the foldiers, who were now quitting the fhip in numbers, and making their way to a fhore, of which they knew not yet the horrors. Among

[ 31 ]

Among other measures adopted to favor these attempts, the enfign-staff had been unshipped, and attempted to be laid from the ship's side to some of the rocks, but without success, for it fnapped to pieces before it reached them, however by the light of a lanthorn, which a seaman, of the name of Burmaster, handed through the sky-light of the round-house to the deck, Mr. Meriton discovered a spar, which appeared to be laid from the ship's side to the rocks, and on this spar he determined to attempt his escape.

He accordingly laid himfelf down on it, and thruft himfelf forward, but he foon found that the fpar had no communication with the rock, he reached the

[ 32 ]

٦.

the end of it, and then slipped off, receiving a very violent bruise in his fall, and before he could recover his legs, he was washed off by the surge, in which he supported himself by swimming, till the returning wave dashed him against the back part of the cavern, where he laid hold of a small projecting piece of the rock, but was so benumbed, that he was on the point of quitting it, when a seaman who had already gained a footing, extended his hand, and affifted him till he could secure himself on a little of the rock, from which he clambered shelf still higher, till he was out of the reach of the surf.

Mr. Rogers, the third Mate remained with the Captain, and the unfortunate ladies ladies, and their companions, near twenty minutes after Mr. Meriton had quitted the ship: Soon after the latter left the round-house, the Captain asked what was become of him, and Mr. Rogers replied that he was gone on the deck, to fee what could be done. --- After this beavy fea breaking over the flip, the ladies exclaimed, "Oh poor Meriton he is drowned, had he staid with us he would have been fafe," and they all, and particularly Miss Mary Peirce, exprefied great concern at the apprehenfion of his loss.-On this occasion Mr. Rogers offered to go and call in Mr. Meriton, but this was opposed by the ladies from an apprehension that be might share the fame fate.

[ 33 ]

Ĩ 34 ]

At this time the fea was breaking in at the fore part of the ship, and reached as far as the main-mait, and Captain l'ierce, gave Mr. Rogers a nod, and they took a lamp, and went together into the stern galiery, and after viewing the rocks for sometime, Captain Pierce asked Mr. Rogers, if he thought there was any possibility of saving the girls, to which he replied, he feared there was not, for they could only discover the - black face of the perpendicular rock, and not the cavern which afforded shelter to those who escaped; they then returned to the round-house, and Mr. Rogers hung up the lamp, and Captain Pierce, with his great coat on, fat down between his two 'daughter's, and ftruggled to suppress the parental tear which #### then burst into his eye.

[ 35. ]

The sea continuing to break in very fast, Mr. M'Manus, a Midshipman, and Mr. Schutz, a passenger, asked Mr. Rogers what they could do to escape, who replied " follow me," and they. then all went into the stern gallery, and from thence by the weather upper quarter gallery upon the poop, and whilst they were there a very heavy sea fell on board, and the round-house gave way, and he heard the ladies shrick at intervals, as if the water had reached them, the noise of the sea at other times drowning their voices.

Mr. Brimer had followed Mr. Rogers to the poop, where they had remained together about five minutes, when on the coming on of the last mentioned sea, they jointly feized a hen-coop, and the fame wave which he apprehended proved fatal to fome of those who remained below, happily carried him and his companion to the rock, on which they were dashed with such violence as to be miscrably bruised and hurt.

E 36 J.

-On this rock were twenty-feven men, but it was low water, and as they were convinced that upon the flowing of the tide, they must all be washed off, many of them attempted to get to the back or fides of the Cavern, out of the reach of the returning fea, in this attempt fearce more than fix, befides himfelf, and Mr. Brimer fucceeded, of the remainder fome shared the sate which they had apprehended, and the others perished in #### their efforts to get into the Cavern.

- t
- •

•••••• • • • · · · ·

[ 37 ]

Mr. Rogers and Mr. Brimer both however reached the cayern, and scrambled up the rock, on narrow shelves of which they fixed themselves, Mr. Rogers got so near to his friend Mr. Meriton as to exchange congratulations with him, but he was prevented from joining him by at least twenty men who were between chem, neither of whom could move without immediate peril of his life. — At the time Mr. Rogers reached this station of possible safety, his strength was fo nearly exhausted, that had the struggle continued a few minutes longer he must have been inevitably loft. ٠, 43 🖤

They now found that a very confiderable number of the crew, seamen, fol-

[ 38 ]

diers, and some petty officers were in the same situation with themselves, tho' many who had reached the rocks below, .had perished, in attempting to ascend; what that situation was they were still to learn; at present they had escaped mediate death, but they were yet to encounter cold, nakedness, wind, rain, and the perpetual beating of the fpray of the fea, for a difficult, precarious, and doubtful chance of escape.

They could yet discern some part of ·the ship, and solaced themselves, in their dreary stations, with the hope of its remaining entire till day break, for, ia the midst of their own misfortunes, the fofferings of the females affected them with the most acute anguish, and every

· • · · · · · ·

[ 39 ]

fea that broke, brought with it terror, for the fate of those amiable, and helpess beings.

But, alas ! their apprehensions were roo foon realized. In a very few minutes after Mr. Rogers had gained the rock, an universal shriek, which still vibrates in their ears, and, in which, the voice of female distress was lamentably distinguissable, announced the dreadful Catastrophe; in a few moments all was hussed in the except the warring winds, and beating waves; the wreck was buried in the remorfeless deep, and not an atom of her was ever after discoverable.

Thus perished the Halsewell, and with her worth, honor, skill, beauty, amiability,

• • •

{ 40 }

bility, and bright accomplifhments; never did the angry elements combat with more elegance; never was a watery grave filled with fuch precious remains. Great God, how inferutable are thy judgments! yet we know them to be juft; nor will we arraign thy mercy, who haft transferred virtue and purity, #### from imperfect, and mutable happines, to bliss eternal !

What an aggravation of woe was this dreadful, this tremendous blow, to the yet trembling, and fcarcely half faved wretches, who were hanging about the fides of the horrid cavern? they were themfelves ftill in the moft imminent danger, but their dearest friends, the pleasing companions of their voyage, those

--

[ 4<sup>I</sup> ]

thole whole beauty, and accomplishments, would have charmed the tedious hours, and beguiled even contrary winds, and all the impediments of a long passage, of the sting of disappointment; had now bid them an everlassing farewell; they felt for themselves, but they wept for wives, parents, fathers, brothers, sisters,—perhaps lovers. All—All cut off from their dearest, their most invaluable hopes.

Nor were they lefs agonized by the fublequent events of this ill-fated night; many of those who had gained the precarious stations which we have described, worn out with fatigue, weakened by bruises, battered by the tempest, and benumbed with the cold, quitted their holdfasts, holdfafts, and tumbling headlong either on the rocks below, or in the furf, perished beneath the seet of their wretched associates, and by their dying groans, and gulping exclamations for pity, awakened terrific apprehensions in the furvivors, of their own approaching fate.

-

[ 42 ]

At length, after the bittereft three hours which mifery ever lengthened into ages, the day broke on them, but inftead of bringing with it the relief with which they had flattered themfelves, ferved to difcover all the horrors of their fituation; they now found that had the country been alarmed by the guns of diftrefs which they had continued to fire for many hours before the fhip ftruck, but which from the violence of the florm were unheard, they could neither be obferved by the people from above, as they were completely ingulphed in the cavern, and over-hung by the cliff, nor did any part of the wreck remain to point out their probable place of refuge; below, no boat could live to fearch them out, and had it been poffible to have acquainted those who would wish to affift them, with their exact fituation, no ropes could be conveyed into the cavity, to facilitate their escape.

[ 43 ]

The only profpect which offered, was to creep along the fide of the cavern, to its outward extremity, and on a ledge fcarcely as broad as a man's hand, to turn the corner, and endeavour to clamber up the almost perpendicular precipice, whose summit was near two hundred feet from the base.

[ 44 ]

And in this desperate effort did some fucceed, whilst others, trembling with ternor, and their strength exhausted by mental and bodily fatigue, lost their

precations footing, and perished in the attempt.

The first men who gained the summit of the cliff, were the Cook, and James Thompson a quarter-master, by their own exercions they made their way to the land, and the moment they reached it, hastened to the nearest house, and made known the situation of their fellowsufferers.

[ 45 ]

The house at which they first arrived: was Eastington, the present habitation of Mr. Garland, steward or agent to the proprietors of the Purbeck Quarries, who immediately got together the workmen under his direction, and with the most zealous and animated humanity, exerted every effort for the prefervation of the surviving crew of this unfortunate ship; ropes were procured with all possible dispatch, and every precaution taken that assistance should be speedily and effectually given; and we are happy in this opportunity of bearing teltimony, under the authority of the principal furviving officers, to the kind, benévolent, and spirited behaviour of this Gentleman, whole conduct on the melancholy occasion, entitles him to universal respect and regard, as well as to the particular gratitude of those who were the immediate objects of his philanthropy.

[ 46 ]

Mr. Meriton made the attempt, and almost reached the edge of the precipice; a soldier who preceded him, had his feet on a small projecting rock or stope, and on the same stone Mr. Meriton had fastened his hands to help his progress; at this critical moment the Quarry-men arrived, and seeing a man so nearly within their reach, they dropped a rope to him, of which he immediately laid hold, and in a vigorous effort to avail himself. of this advantage, he loosened the stone on which he stood, which giving way, Mr. Meriton must have been precipitated to the bottom, but that a rope was pro-videntially lowered to him at the inftant, which he feized as he was in the act of falling, and was fafely drawn to the fummit.

[ 47 ]

The fate of Mr. Brimer was peculiarly fevere, this Gentleman who had only been married nine days befole the thip sailed, to a beautiful lady, the daughter of Capt. Norman, of the Royal Navy, in which fervice Mr. Brimer was a lieutenant, but was now on a voyage to visit an uncle at Madrass; came on shore, as we have already observed, with Mr. Rogers, and like him got up the fide of the cavern, where he remained till the morning, when he crawled our, and arope being thrown to him, he was either: fo benumbed with the cold as to fasten.

ίΣ

[ 48 ]

ir about him improperly, or so agitated, as to neglect making it fast at all; but from which ever cause it arose, the effect was fatal to him; at the moment of his supposed preservation, he fell from his stand, and was unfortunately dashed to pieces, in the presence of those who could only lament the deplorable state of an amiable and worthy man, and an able and skilful officer.

As the day advanced, more affiftance was obtained; and as the life-preferving efforts of the furvivors would admit, they crawled to the extremities of the cavern, and prefented themfelves to their prefervers above, who flood prepared with the means which the fituation would permit them to exercise, to help them to

[ 49. ]

The method of affording this help was fingular, and does honour to the humanity and intrepidity of the Quarrymen. The distance from the top of the rock to the cavern, was at least 100 feet with a projection of the former of about 8 feet, ten of these formed a declivity to; the edge, and the remainder of it was perpendicular. On the very brink of the precipice stood two daring fellows, a rope being tied round them, and fastened above to a strong iron bar, fixed in the ground, behind them in like manner two more, and two more. A strong rope also properly secured, passed between them, by which they might hold and support themselves from falling; they then let down another rope with a noofe ready fixed below the cavern;

[50].

and the wind blowing hard, it was in fome inflances forced under the projecting rock fufficiently for the fufferers to reach it without crawling to the extremity, in either cafe, whoever laid hold of it, put the noofe round his waift, and after efcaping from one element, committed himfelf full fiving to another, in which he dangled till he was drawn up with great care and caution.

It is but justice in this place to say, that the furvivors received the friendly and humane affistance of Mr. Jones and Mr. Hawker, gentlemen resident near the fpot.

But in this attempt many flared the

fate

5 I ]

fate of the unfortunate Mr. Brimer; and unable through cold, weakness, perturbation of mind, or the incommodious of the stations they occupied, to avail themselves of the succour which was offered them; were at last precipitated from the stupendous cliff, and were either dashed to pieces on the rocks beneath, or falling into the furge, perilhed in the waves.

Among these unhappy sufferers, the definy of a drummer belonging to the military on board the Halfewell, was attended with circumstances of peculiar distress; being either washed off the rock. by the feas, or falling into the furf. from above, he was carried by the counter sea's or returning, waves, beyond the breakers, within which his utmost efforts could never again bring him, but he was drawn further out to fea, and as he fwam remarkably well, continued to Aruggle with the waves, in fight of his pitying companions, till his ftrength was exhausted, and he sunk, to rise no more.

[ 52]

--It was not till late in the day that the furvivors were all conveyed to fafety, one indeed, William Trenton, a soldier, remained on his perilous stand till the morning of Saturday the 7th of January, exposed to the united horrors of the extremest personal danger, and the most acute disquietude of mind; nor is it easy to conceive how his strength and spirits could have supported him for such a number of hours; under diftrefs fo poignant-and complicated. Though

[ 53 ]

Though the remains of the wreck were no longer difcoverable among the rocks, yet the furface of the fea was covered with the fragments as far almost as the eye could reach, and even fo late as ten' o'clock on the Friday morning, a sheep, part of the live stock of the unfortunate officers, was observed buffeting the angry

The furviving officers, feamen, and foldiers, being now affembled at the houfe of their benevolent friend, Mr. Garland, they were muftered, and found to amount to feventy-four, out of rather more than two hundred and forty, which was about the number of the crew and paffengers in the fhip when fhe failed through the Downs; of the remainder, who unhappily'

•

[ 54 ]

pily lost their lives, upwards of seventy are supposed to have reached the rocks, but to have been washed off, or to perish in falling from the cliffs, and fifty or more to have sunk with the Captain and the ladies in the round-house, when the after part of the ship went to pieces.

All those who reached the summit sur-

As the last returns which were dispatched from the ship have never come m hand, and all books and papers went yet recovered.

vived, except two or three, who are supposed to have expired in drawing up, and a black, who died in a few hours after he was brought to the house, though many of them were so miserably bruised that their lives were doubtful, and they are scarcely

tO

[ 55 ]

to the bottom with her, it has been impoffible to obtain an exact lift of the feamen, foldiers, paffengers, and fervants, who were on board her at the time fhe failed, nor is the lift of the officers perfectly complete, fome of the more fubordinate being ufually entered on the fhip's books, at the time they actually come on board.

We shall, however, offer to our readers, two lifts; the first, of all the principal officers, and such others as can be precifely ascertained, who sailed in her, and the authenticity of which, as far as it goes, may be depended on; the second (in which but few doubts occur) of the persons who were saved.

1

56 ]

LIST of Officers on board the HALSEWELL, at the time she failed :

- Richard Pierce Captain
- Thomas Burfton Chief Mate
- Henry Meriton Second Mate
- John Rogers Third Mate
- Henry Pilcher Fourth Mate

William Larkins — Fifth Mate James Brimer. — Supernumerary ditto John Daniel - Sixth Mate Thomas Clothier — Surgeon Richard Fowler — Purser ------ M'Coy --- Surgeon's Mate ------ Falconer --- Ditto William Rayner — Purfer's Affistant Duncan M'Dougal Midshipman ----- M'Manus - Ditto James Humphries Ditto WilliamHumphries Ditto

[ 57 -]

Charles Templer Youths under the Charles Webber William Cowley Miller Miller Adding as Midshipmen James Welch — Gunner Daniel Frazer ---- Boatswain John Harrison - Sail-maker Edward Hart — Gunner's Mate Jacob Murray - Ditto Thomas Barnaby — Boatswain's Mate Benjamin Barclay - Quarter-master James Thompson Ditto Andrew West ----- Ditto Gilbert Ogilvie - Ditto Joseph Jackson — Ditto Jonath. Moreton- Ditto Thomas Firth —— Captain's Steward George Wilson - Ship's Steward James Jackson - Carpenter's Mate

William Fleet ----- Caulker's Mate

James Turner — Cooper

. [ 58 ]

LIST of the Officers, Seamen, and Soldiers faved.

- Henry Meriton -- Second Mate
  - John Rogers Third Mate
  - John Daniel Sixth Mate
  - Duncan M'Dougal Midshipman
  - M'Manus Ditro
  - James Welch ---- Gunner

James Weich — Boatfwain John Harrifon — Sail-maker Edward Hart — Gunner's Mate Jacob Murray — Ditto Thomas Barnaby — Boatfwain's Mate Benjamin Barclay — Quarter-mafter James Thompfon Ditto Andrew Weft — Ditto Gilbert Ogilvie — Ditto Jofeph Jackfon — Ditto

[ 59 ].

- James Jackson Carpenter's Mate
- William Fleet ----- Caulker's Mate
- James Turner Cooper
- Robert Pierce—— Cook
- Richard Tupman- Seaman
- Thomas Morgan Ditto
- John Lock Ditto
- Timothy Forster Ditto
- George Woodgate Ditto

Anderson - Ditto
Morris — Ditto
Harris Ditto
Viccary — Ditto
Cownden - Ditto
Millar Ditto
Ansley - Ditto
Thompson Ditto
Sunderland Ditto
Rogers - Ditto

[ 60 ]

- Nath, Mingies Seaman
- John Price Ditto
- John Love Ditto
  - Thomas Brooks Ditto
  - Solomon Bevans Ditto
  - Michael Bevans Ditto
  - Isaac Holland Ditto
- Robert Humphries Ditto Richard Berry — Ditto John White — Ditto Peter Rofs — Ditto Thomas White — Ditto John Anderfon — Ditto George Ruffell — Ditto Robert Roberts — Ditto William Evans — Ditto James Flendall — Ditto George Powdrill — Ditto

[ 61 ]

- John Fowles Soldier
- Joshua Hawkins- Ditto
- William Gapon Ditto
- James Rowley Ditto
- Richard Strover Ditto
- Thomas Jones Ditto
- Robert Daniel Ditto
- William Spraggs Ditto

Thomas	Eastman- Ditto
William	Clark — Ditto
William	Rickies — Ditto
John	Morse — Ditto
Caleb	Austen — Ditto
Joleph	Watlon - Ditto
	Shaftoe — Ditto
John	Todd — Ditto
William	Johnston – Ditto
Richard	Reeves Diuo
Philip.	Smith Ditto

Patrick

Ν.

[ 62 ] Patrick Ganetty — Soldier Benjamin Morris — Ditto Thomas Sanders — Ditto James Shield — Ditto John White — Ditto William Trenton — Ditto

On Saturday morning Mr. Meriton

and Mr. Rogers, having been liberally affifted by Mr. Garland with the means of making the journey, fet off for London, to carry the melancholy tidings to the Directors of the India-House; and having humanely taken the precaution to acquaint the magistrates of the towns through which they passed, that a number of shipwrecked men would be soon on the road to the metropolis, (left the tedious and disagreeable way-fare of

[ 63 ]

of these unfortunate beings should be rendered more miferable by unjust fufpicions) they arrived at the India-House on Sunday the 8th inftant at noon, where the fad tale was no sooner told, than the Directors, with their ofoal munificence, ordered handsome gratifications to the Quarry-men and others, who affifted in faving the furvivors, and provided some immediate support for those who out-lived this lamentable event. To Mr, Garland the Directors have also made such acknowledgment of thanks, as his benevolent conduct merited.

It would be unjust to suppress a circumstance, which reflects great honor on the benevolence of the master of the Crown

•

[ 64 ]

Crown Inn, at Blandford, Dorfetshire : When the distressed feamen arrived in that town, he fent for them all to his house, and having given them the refreshment of a comfortable dinner, he presented each man with half a crown to help him on his journey. An example of liberality, which we trust will have its effect,

Before we pay the tribute due to the memories of thole who unfortunately fuffered on this deplorable occasion, it may not be improper to remark, that a very particular friendship subsisted between Mr. Meriton and Mr. Rogers, the two principal officers who escaped the dreadful catastrophe; they had made a long and painful voyage together in the Pigot, and were among the few who

[ 65 ]

furvived the mortality with which the crew of that fhip was vifited: On their return to England, twenty-five days only before they undertook the voyage which has been fo unhappily interrupted; they again engaged to embark in the fame bottom, and Providence has a fecond time refcued them from impending death: The fanction which these Gentlemen have given to this narrative, prevents our speaking of them in the language which their universal reputation dictates.

The character of Captain Pierce is beyond eulogium; his professional skill and knowledge will be best testified by the command with which he had been long invested, and which he bore with equal honour to himself, and advantage to his employers. His integrity was as unimpeached as bis punctuality' was exemplary. He was generous without profusion, and liberal without ostentation. His heart and his hand corresponded in the exercise of every act of humanity; from his door the distressed never departed without relief. He was a fincere and zealous friend, a kind and unassuming benefactor. In his family he was a pattern of excellence, a tender and affectionate husband, a fond and indulgent parent, a mild and beneficent master. In his ship he was the friend of his officers, the protector of youth, the encourager of merit, a father to the crew : Few private men have deserved, few have enjoyed, a character so totally irreproachable, so conspicuously eminent.

E

[ 66 ]

• •

67

His daughters (in acts of tenderness to whom he nobly and heroically expired) were as remarkable for accomplishment of mind, and sweetness of disposition, as for the elegance of their persons, and the extent of their polite acquirements; they were educated under the immediate care of their parents, and repaid their tenderness by the most dutiful and affectionate attention.

Six children happily furvive him, and we trust will ferve as comforters to his afflicted and yet disconsolate widow, to whom he had been married upwards of twenty years; one of these, the eldest, a fon, and the name-fake of his lamented father, is now about eighteen years old, and was left in the East-Indies by Capt. Pierce on his last voyage; the others are two

[ 68 ]

two of each fex of different ages, and an infant yet at its mother's breast. Mrs. Pierce was the daughter of Thomas Burston, Esq; the Collector of Excise for the County of Surrey; and at Kingston in that county, Captain Pierce and his family have resided almost constantly from the time of his marriage. As merit and industry, like his, could hardly fail of success, it is faid he had acquired a competent fortune, and intended that this should be his last voyage.-Unhappily. for his family, his friends, and the community, the progress of it was stopped by an event which has produced the most universal and unaffected concern.

The two Miss Pauls were relations to Captain Pierce, and daughters of a gentleman

*******

[ 69 ]

tleman of the West of England, beautiful, fensible, amiable, and accomplished young women—Happy in the companionship of their beloved cousins, happyin the protection of their worthy and affectionate Father, the pain of quitting their still nearer relations, and the terrors of a long voyage were diffipated, and their embarkation seemed only to be an agreeable change of fituation-How uncertain are the expectations, how delusive the prospects, how evanescent the hopes, by which mortals are guided in the pursuit of sublunary happiness!

Miss Blackburne was the daughter of Captain Blackburne, a commander also in the service of the East-India Company, who now resides at Old Malton in York#### shire.

[ 70 ]

shire. If the reports we have heard be true, that this gentleman has lately loft two fons by untimely and accidental deaths, what pity and commileration is due to him on the additional misfortune which has befallen him in the person of a daughter, whose beauty and merit were equally the objects of admiration.

Of Miss Haggard and Miss Mansel no further circumstances have come to our knowledge, than those we have already mentioned; but it is universally allowed by those to whom they were known, that they may be very defervedly grouped with their amiable fellow-fufferers.

Mr. Schutz had acquired a very considerable fortune in Asia, from whence he

[ 71 ]

he had not been long returned; but fome difficulties arifing in the collection and remittance of confiderable fums which he had left behind him in the Eaft, he found it neceffary to make another voyage to Indoltan, but unhappily perifhed, in all probability, as he was attempting to gain the rock, his body having fince been found, and received interment. Of this gentleman's family and connections no accounts have come to our hands, but the officers who furvive fpeak of his character with great refpect.

Mr. Pilcher, the fourth mate, was about twenty-four years of age, a young gentleman highly esteemed; he was lately a lieutenant on board the Scipio, a guardship, commanded by Captain Inglefield; his father, Edward Pilcher, Efq. is in the commission of the peace for the County of Kent.—Mr. Falconer, one of the surgeon's mates, was the fon of Magnus Falconer, Esq. one of the Master Attendants of Chatham Yard, and was going to settle at Bencoolen.—Mr. William Rayner, the Purser's Assistant, was the fon of a gentleman of very refpectable abilities in the law, and grandfon of John Rayner, Esq. late of Sunbury, in Middlesex.

[ 72 ]

t

Among the youths who were cut off by this dreadful blow, were Mr. Charles Templer, brother of James Templer, Efq. His Majesty's Attorney, and Master of the Crown-office in the King's-bench. Mr. Charles Webber, fon of the late Admiral Webber, and fon-in-law to Wm.

[ 73 ]

Smith, Eíq of His Majesty's Office of Grdnance.—Mr. William Cowley, son of — Cowley, Efq. of Kingston, in Surrey, and Mr. — Miller, son of Mr. Miller, organist, of Doncaster; this young gentleman was a proficient in music, and it was intended, with his affistance, and that of some of the Captain's band, to have formed occasional concerts, in which the ladies would also have taken parts, to amuse them on the passage.

Among the Midshipmen who suffered was Mr. Thomas Jeane, son of Thomas Jeane Esq; of Moncton, near Taunton, in Somersetsshire, this youth was also under the immediate care of Captain Pierce, and his sate was also attended with many calamitous circumstances;

.

[ 74 ]

after he had quitted the ship and gained the rock, he was again fwept off by the devouring waves, swimming well, he a second time got footing on the rock, but being now worn out with fatigue, and stiff with cold, he could not support himself against the continued assaults of the tempest, but after seven hours endurance of all the discomforts of his situation, he was compelled by debility to abandon his only hope of life, and perified in the fea.

Cf the other officers who perished, no particular Accounts have been obtained, nor any anecdotes of any of the other sufferers, except the following, which the Editor subjoins in the very elegant and affecting language in which it was con#### veyed to bim.

1

Amongst

[ 75 ]

Amongst the many unfortunate sufferers, were Mr. James Humphries, and Mr. William Humphries, 10ns of the Reverend Mr. Francis Humphries, the present Curate of Hampstead. The youngest had already made one voyage to the East Indies, and by his good conduct recommended himfelf to Capt. Pierce, who had received him on board as a midshipman. The eldest had been educated at Woolwich, and acquired complete military knowledge, fuch as induced him to hope for promotion. But being without connexions or interest, he ftood no chance of a commission on the return of peace, and therefore quitted the academy. A warm friend of his father, who had greatly interested himfelf, and affifted him in the advancement' of a numerous family, exerted himself in favour of this young man, and got him on board' the Halfewell, with a prospect of the most flattering nature. It opened to him fuddenly, he had but a few hours to prepare for a fix months voyage; however he sat about it with spirit and activity, inspired by hopes that fortune would favour his devout wishes, and enable him to repay a fond father the expences of an education, not quite convenient to a situation in life, seldom accompanied with affluence. But alas! how foon were his pious dreams closed by a watery grave! all that we have learned of these unfortunate brothers is, that they were seen, by one of the seamen, aiding each other in the devouring `waves, but we are unhappy not to find their names in the lift of furvivors.-One may form some estimate of their merit by a circumstance that strongly marks it, and ought not to be concealed, for the honour of a young gentleman, whofe name is Lewis. Mr. Humphries, for the purpose of augmenting his little income, and better support of his numerous family, has of late years taken a few pupils, and amongst them Mr. Lewis. The amiable difpolition of his lost companions had created fuch an 'attachment in him, that his distress on hearing the horrid tale was truly fraternal. The injunctions of a mother, and persuasions of his friends, could scarcely refirain him from weeping over the tremendous rock that deprived him of his beloved affociates, and exploring the coast for the recovery of their bodies, to perform his last kind office; by their decent interment. - Amiable, sympathising youth ! May success reward thy virtuous, generous views! May thy pillow be soft in the hour of death, and may some friendly hand be near, to close thine eyes!

[ 76 ]

[ 77 ]

[ 78 ]

۵

Nor may it be improper to mention the escape of Sir George L. Staunton and his lady from being sharers in this dreadful catastrophe.-This gentleman who had long been in the particular confidence of Lord Macartney, accompanied him to Madrafs as his Secretary, and came to England after the conclusion of the peace with Tippoo Saib

[ 79 ]

Saib in the treaty for which he had a very considerable part. He was now about to return to Alia, and had actually engaged for the passages of himself and lady in the Halfewell, but the arrival or immediate expectation of Lord Macartney in England, happily induced him to abandon his intentions but a #### very few days before the ship failed.

Though we are aware that the task is arduous, and are conficious of our own inability, we cannot conclude this little narrative without offering to the relations and friends of those who have suffered in this unfortunate disafter, such consolation as presents itself on a retrospect of the feveral circumstances which have been drawn together in the foregoing

[ 80· ]

. Let those to whom the amiable fufferers were most dear, reflect on the fate of such of the same sex as were wrecked in the Grosvenor, who escaping a sudden violent death, were exposed to hunger, thirst, nakedness, the attacks of wild beasts, and of the still greater brutes, the favages of the human race; who, cut off from all hope of ever being reftored to any of the comforts of society, must have looked forward to death as a refuge from such transcendent calamities, and bave considered its tardy approach as a delay of happiness; and let them compare the fate of these wretched victims to that of the friends for whom they mourn, who, in all the purity of virtue, were in a moment transferred to everlasting happiness, without a pang, and almost without an apprehension; and they will find an alleviation of their grief which reflection will strengthen, till time has mellowed the poignancy of their anguish into mild and tender regret.

[ 81 ]

.

Let the friends and relations of the officers, seamen and others of that sex, derive comfort from the consideration that the lives of those who are engaged in this perilous profession, are in a constant exposure to dangers more oftensible, though perhaps not more actual, than those of the tradession, the mechanic, or the artificer; and that the separation of such as are employed in this way of life from the rest of the community, renders the accidents which befal them more confpicuous and observable; that they would, in all probability, lose the fame

E 82 ]

Fame number of those will whom they are connected in the ordinary events of mortality, and that the pursuits which brought them to this sudden, and, apparently, untimely end, were innocent, useful, and laudable.

And above all, let the afflicted on the prefent occalion, remember that the friends they lament neither precipitated themfelves to deftruction by neglect, obftinacy, temerity, or even imprudence; but that the event, however melancholy in its operation, was the difpenfation of that Being who " rides in the sobirisonal; and directs the form;" and that all his purpoles, however unaccountable in the weak perceptions of human wildom, are unquestionably wife, gracious, and ultive mately merciful.

Source Citation: "A circumstantial narrative of the loss of the Halsewell. (East-Indiaman.) Capt. Richard Pierce, which was ... wrecked at Seacombe Source Library: http://find.galegroup.com/ecco/infomark.do?&contentSet=ECCOArticles&type=multipage&tablD=T001&prodId=ECCO&docId=CW 2009 3304682459&source=gale&userGroupName=hsociety&version=1.0&docLevel=FASCIMILE> Henry Meriton and Mr. John Rogers, ..." London, 1786. Eighteenth Century Collections Online. Gale. History Society Trial. 7 July in the Isle of Purbeck, ... Friday the 6th of January, 1786. Compiled from the communications, and under the authorities of Mr BRITISH XXXX8I Sourced from the British Library

